LIFE IN WASHINGTON.

REPUBLICAN REPORTERS,

Wouldn't Tell His Mame.

They were two seedy-looking tramps. For three hears they had been sitting in front of a store on the Arenes essuning thenselves, and eagerly watching each passing smoker to see if he three wawy his "stub." The thing, after a while, became monotonous; they secured one "stub," which made each a "chaw," and then they began to anuse themselves by equirting to-baces Juice on the feet of children passing by. Little did they dream that a "cop" had his eye upon them and had marked them for his own. After the "cop" saw them spolling the clean shoes of a little girl with their dirty spection, he muttered granty, "This thing's been going on long enough," so he stepped up and collared them just as one was about to close the eye of a passing peodle with a "mouthful."

He took them to the estation house; the station house heeper asked "What's your name?" "I won't tell," was the reply. Turning to the ether, he asked, "What's quire!" "I wen't tell you." The officer took them by the neckamb lead them hack. He seized the largest one and fung him on a long table, face downward, and held him there while another officer picked up a large steel shovel that was standing by Wouldn't Tell His Name.

large steel shovel that was standing by and 'brought it dewn upon the most preminent part with a vigor that parted the cloth, and the "very" reared with pain. "Will you tell me your name? Whach! Will year" (Whach: trop: I'vi ball: I'll tell: Go-cht: Jim Brown's was me." The officers let him up and turned for the other, but he "weekened" at once, and cried out, "My names John West." "Well, get in here, both of you," and he opened an end door and show it in min, and as the officers walked away laughing, the "buil doned" brother in the cell give. "I'll have revenge for this yea, so I will. A man pointed a pistol at me on the street, and I'm going to sue be city for it."

The members of the church and congregation of the E street Baptist church, who have recently formed a "Social Christian Union," held their first regular meeting last night in the lecture-room of the shareb, and enjoyed the evening is a pleasant and profitable manuer.

The programme censisted of musical and literary exercises, combined with social and driendly intercourse, all tending to moral, intellectual and spiritual improvement. During the evening the ladies served those sreemt with bounting refreshments, and allogether the occasion was one of those halting places in the journey of life where each member grasps more liredly the hand of his neighbor, and the beand of rirendship and drawn up a little closer, and in a more compact and my more orward signing to seconplus what the Manter may have wides for them to do.

A WOODEN-LEGGED GHOST.

A Haunted House on 2 Bircet Strampo Bounds Than Startled the Burgess Family. Mr. Burgess's family moved into a house on I street about the first of the month, and since then they have been nightly aisramed by strange noises, proceeding from the next house. For a short period during every night, something would thump, thump, through the house in the disagreeable manner that some ghosts have of doing such things. At 2 evince punctually every meruing the sounds were heard, and the family, who were new to the neighborhood, ere all fear and excitement. The whole family was lessing sleep, and it was with the greatest difficulty that the boy could be persuaded to go out in the yard at night and bring in the clothes off the line. When he did go the family had to escort him out with manps, so that the neighbors thought they were rehearing for a torchlight procession. The beds of the safter Burgess family were moved into one room, so that they could be near each other in case the ghost should pass through the wall. Whenever a cat ran across the woodshed eight white-robed people, pale as phantoms, with chattering taeth, sat up in bed and held their breath, waiting for more developments.
